To the Editor of The Evening World;

The interview with a striking eigarette girl, printed in THE EVENING WORLD of Friday COCK'S PLASTERS are a sure last gives the impression that all the eigarette factories in New York tend to debase these employed in them; that they work more hours than called for by law, and receive more hours than called for by law, and receive pay inadequate to their labor. While this may be true in individual instances, I am convinced that the statement is far too sweeping. In our factory none of the abuses rejerred to exist. The girls work but eight hours a day, and are paid from $0 to $12 a week, which is good pay for is male labor. We claim that our factory is a model one, both from the standpoint of cleanliness and for the comfort of those working in it.
